

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON
AT SEATTLE

OTAN INVESTMENTS, LLC,

Plaintiff,

v.

TRANS-PACIFIC TRADING, LTD.,

Defendant.

CASE NO. C05-2135JLR

AMENDED ORDER

I. INTRODUCTION

This matter comes before the court on a motion to compel arbitration by Trans-Pacific Trading, Ltd. (“Trans-Pacific”) (Dkt. # 11). The court has heard oral argument on the motion and has considered the papers filed in support and in opposition thereof. For the reasons stated below, the court GRANTS Trans-Pacific’s motion and STAYS the action.

II. BACKGROUND

In September 2004, Plaintiff Otan Investments, LLC (“Otan”), a Washington company, entered into an agreement with a Canadian company, Defendant Trans-Pacific. The objective of the contract was “to set up joint activity for forwarding, remanufacturing

1 and marketing wood products from fiber originating from Russia.” Tyrer Aff., Exh. A
 2 (“First Agreement”). Specifically, Otan agreed to provide the steady supply of product
 3 from its operations in Lesosibirsk, Russia, which Trans-Pacific agreed to market in North
 4 America, Europe, China and Japan. First Agreement ¶¶ 1, 2.

5 Just three months after the parties signed the First Agreement, the parties executed
 6 a second contract, which states in its preamble that “the Seller [Otan] owns and operates a 7 sawmill in the Russian Federation . . . and wishes to retain the Agent [Trans-Pacific] for 8 the purpose of selling lumber, outside Russia, and for the purpose of collecting the 9 proceeds of sale.” Tyrer Aff., Exh. B (“Second Agreement”). The Second Agreement
 10 identifies the sawmill as Otan’s operation in Lesosibirsk, Russian, Second Agreement 11 ¶ 1.2(m), and provides that Trans-Pacific will use “all reasonable commercial efforts to 12 sell the total production of the Sawmill,” Second Agreement ¶ 3.1(x) (emphasis added).
 13

14 In addition to defining the duties of each party with respect to marketing and selling wood
 15 products, the contract provides the following alternative dispute resolution (“ADR”)
 16 clause:
 17

18 Where a dispute arises out of or in connection with this Agreement, or in 19 respect of any defined legal relationship associated with it or from it (the 20 “Dispute”), the parties will try to resolve the Dispute by participating in a 21 structured negotiation conference with a mediator under the Commercial Mediation Rules of the British Columbia International Commercial Arbitration Centre (the “Centre”).

22 Where the parties are unable to resolve the Dispute in a structured 23 negotiation conference, the Dispute shall be determined by arbitration in 24 accordance with the UNCITRAL Arbitration Rules in effect [on] the date of this contract

25 Tyrer Aff., Exh. B (Second Agreement) ¶ 9.9. The Second Agreement does not expressly 26 reference the First Agreement.

27 Otan sued Trans-Pacific in King County Superior Court for breach of contract 28 alleging that Trans-Pacific failed to market wood products originating in Russia as

1 promised under the First Agreement. Compl. ¶¶ 5, 6. Trans-Pacific removed to this court
 2 on the basis of diversity jurisdiction and pursuant to the Federal Arbitration Act, 9 U.S.C.
 3 § 1, et seq. Trans-Pacific now moves to compel arbitration over the dispute based on the 4 ADR provision in the Second Agreement.

III. ANALYSIS

The Federal Arbitration Act (“FAA”)¹ reflects “Congress’ intent to provide for the enforcement of arbitration agreements within the full reach of the Commerce Clause.” Nicaragua v. Standard Fruit Co., 937 F.2d 469, 475 (9th Cir. 1991) (quoting Perry v.
Thomas, 482 U.S. 483, 490 (1987)). Once the court determines that a valid arbitration agreement exists and that it applies to the parties’ dispute, the inquiry ends and the court must direct the parties to arbitrate. Id. at 475, 478; Dean Witter Reynolds, Inc. v. Byrd, 470 U.S. 213, 218 (1985) (the FAA “leaves no place for the exercise of discretion by a district court, but instead mandates that district courts shall direct the parties to proceed to arbitration”) (emphasis original). The court resolves any doubt as to the scope of arbitrable issues in favor of arbitration. Id. at 478-79; Moses H. Cone Memorial Hospital
v. Mercury Constr. Corp., 460 U.S. 1, 24-25 (1983) (“[Q]uestions of arbitrability must be addressed with a healthy regard for the federal policy favoring arbitration.”).

As a threshold matter, the court holds that the ADR clause is valid and evinces the parties’ intent to arbitrate. Neither party claims a contractual defect that would render ¹There is no dispute that the FAA applies to this matter. The relevant FAA provision provides: “A written provision in . . . a contract evidencing a transaction involving commerce to settle by arbitration a controversy thereafter arising out of such contract or transaction, or the refusal to perform the whole or any part thereof, or an agreement in writing to submit to arbitration an existing controversy arising out of such a contract, transaction, or refusal, shall be valid, irrevocable, and enforceable, save upon such grounds as exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract.” 9 U.S.C. § 2.

1 this agreement invalid; rather, the parties' dispute goes to the scope of the agreement.
2 Otan contends that the court should not compel arbitration for two primary reasons: (1)
3 the parties' dispute arises under a separate contract (the First Agreement) from the 4 contract containing the ADR clause (the Second Agreement) and (2) the ADR clause does
5 not survive the termination of the Second Agreement – i.e., its scope is temporally 6 limited.

8 First, the court concludes that the subject matter of the parties' dispute falls within 9 the scope of the ADR clause. Otan contends that its breach of contract claim arises solely 10 under the First Agreement and thus, the ADR clause in the Second Agreement does not 11 apply. In support of its argument, Otan cites a line of cases in which courts have refused 12 to apply an arbitration provision in one contract to a dispute arising under a wholly 13 separate contract. See, e.g., Seaboard Coast Line R.R. v. Trailer Train Co., 690 F.2d
14 1343, 1352 (11th Cir. 1982); Security Watch, Inc. v. Sentinel Systems, Inc., 176 F.3d
15 369, 372 (6th Cir. 1999); In re Hops Antitrust Litigation, 655 F. Supp. 169, 172 (E.D.
16 Mo. 1987). Setting aside the non-binding nature of this line of authority, the court notes 17 that the key inquiry underlying each decision is whether the two contracts at issue are 18 either “interrelated,” In re Hops, 655 F. Supp. at 172, or “separate and distinct,”
19 Seaboard, 690 F. 2d at 1351.

20
21 The rationale cited above is the same in this circuit. In a decision cited by neither 22 party, Int'l Ambassador Programs, Inc. v. Archexpo, the Ninth Circuit considered
23 whether an arbitration clause in a prior agreement applied to a dispute arising under a 24 subsequent contract. 68 F.3d 337, 339-40 (9th Cir. 1995). As in the cases cited by Otan, 25 the Ninth Circuit considered whether the two agreements at issue were “discreet” or 26 “merely interrelated contracts.” Id. at 340. Because the agreements concerned “two 27 separate types of tours and completely different groups of tourists,” the court held that the 28

1 arbitration clause did not apply. Id.; see also Hinson v. Jusco, 868 F. Supp. 145, 148
2 (D.S.C. 1994) (holding that the dispute arose under one or “some mixture of the two”
3 related contracts and thus, fell within the arbitration clause contained in the earlier 4 agreement).

5 Here, based on the terms of the contracts themselves, the court considers the two 6 agreements entirely interrelated and thus, distinguishable from the discreet contracts in 7 Archpexo and those at issue in the remaining out-of-circuit authority cited by Otan. The 8 Second Agreement, which covers Trans-Pacific’s obligations as to “the total production”
9 from the Lesosibirsk sawmill, is related, if not wholly intertwined, with the First 10 Agreement that directs Trans-Pacific to market products from the very same facility. At 11 oral argument, Otan conceded that it did not have any evidence that the parties even 12 conducted business in the three months between execution of the First and Second 13 Agreements, while there is no dispute that at least some of the facts giving rise to the 14 instant dispute occurred after the parties signed the Second Agreement. To compel 15 arbitration, Otan’s factual allegations need only “touch matters” covered by the Second 16 Agreement with all doubts resolved in favor of arbitrability. Simula, Inc. v. Autolive, 17 Inc., 175 F.3d 716, 721 (9th Cir. 1999). In this instance, Otan’s factual allegations could 18 not be more plain: according to Otan, Trans-Pacific failed to effectively market wood 19 products originating from its mill in Russia. Compl. ¶¶ 5-8. The court need not address
20 the competing declarations that address whether the parties intended the Second 21 Agreement to supercede the First. Rather, the court concludes that the two contracts are 22 interrelated and that Otan’s allegations certainly “touch matters” concerning the Second 23 Agreement. Simula, 175 F.3d at 721; cf. Hinson, 868 F. Supp. at 148. Accordingly, the 24 parties’ dispute falls within the breadth of the Second Agreement’s ADR clause.
25
26
27
28

1 Lastly, Otan contends that the ADR clause does not apply because it is contained
 2 in the Second Agreement, which expired in June 2005.² In general, the arbitration
 3 provision in a contract survives termination of the contract unless there is clear evidence
 4 that the parties intended to override such a presumption. Nolde Bros., Inc. v. Local No.
 5 358 Bakery and Confectionery Workers Union, 430 U.S. 243, 255 (1977). The same
 6 presumption applies even if the facts giving rise to the dispute take place after the 7 contract expires. See Riley Mfg. Co., Inc. v. Anchor Glass Container Corp., 157 F.3d
 8 775, 779 (10th Cir. 1998). Accordingly, the court concludes that the ADR clause
 9 survives termination of the Second Agreement.
 10

11 IV. CONCLUSION

12 For the foregoing reasons, the court GRANTS Trans-Pacific's motion (Dkt. # 13 11). The court directs the parties to pursue alternative dispute resolution consistent with 14 the procedure outlined in the Second Agreement, ¶ 9.9. In the interim, the court STAYS 15 the proceeding.

26 ²The Second Agreement has the following sunset clause: "The term of this Agreement
 27 will commence on 1 Jan 2005 and will end on 30 June 2005 2000 [sic], and will continue 28 thereafter only if agreed in writing by the parties." Second Agreement ¶ 2.4. The parties do not dispute that they did not renew the contract upon expiration in June 2005.
